AFTERWORD

As this book has been compiled there have been confidences given which could not, in love, be repeated and inscribed within the pages of the Taylor Family History. Suggestions have been made that emphasis be made of the tendency toward heart problems that would seem to be part of the Taylor heritage. There are those who would have this book be the harbinger of doom concerning mental depression as a familial legacy. It is easy to listen to stories of grandma's continual battle for inner peace and serenity, and as some of the first cousins fight this same battle today, it is easy to say, "It just runs in the family." In the past year it has been the fortune of several family members to be victimized by cancer. As the word spreads of the cousins' illnesses, so spread the sometime spoken and sometimes silent worry that the Taylor blood and genes carry the cells of this dreaded disease.

Medical answers are not ours to proliferate. But, common sense and prayers would suggest the following points to be considered by Taylor descendants:

1. It is only wise that ALL people, regardless of heritage, take care of their bodies by using exercise, food and time wisely. If we feel that the tendency toward heart disease is ours, then we are lucky. We have been forewarned, and should prepare our bodies to fight it, if and when it should come.
2. Grandma Taylor had 11 children. She lived on a farm where she, with the help from family members, raised the food she prepared for them daily. She was busy all the time, and there must have been times when her body and mind simply could not cope with the stress exerted upon them. From her we should absorb the message that we need to love ourselves enough to take the time to set our priorities with a strength that will allow us time for ourselves. We do not think there is an inherited mental disease in our genes; there are only tired bodies and minds which are seeking only peace and tranquility.

3. As we open the newspapers, scan magazines, listen to television it is impossible not to accept the fact that cancer is rapidly taking its place as one of the most deadly of diseases, and statistics about the victims multiply rapidly. It is not just Taylor descendants who are stricken, it is a national increase. But with the bad news comes the good: new and better cancer detection methods are being found; there have been startling break throughs in the treatment of what was once regarded as a certain death sentence. New medicines, new surgery techniques, new hopes have been added to the prognoses of cancer victims. Again, not only the Taylors, but ALL wise people should become aware of symptoms and danger signs, and make sure that they eat, live, work and play wisely.

This is the heritage we should pass on to our children: a healthy body fights any enemy better. We believe that fear and dread are not the true legacies of the Joe and Abby Scott Taylor descendants. Instead, we should pass on to them hope, health, love and wisdom. These are the things we should have learned from Grandma and Grandpa Taylor.

Garden Supper Enjoyed By Taylor Family

Taylor family members enjoyed their traditional July 24th celebration which annually honors Glen L. Taylor of American Fork, on the occasion of his birthday anniversary.

Those attending were: Mrs. Frank R. Taylor and daughters, Kathleen and Marilyn and Carolyn, twins, guests from Raymond, Alberta, Canada; Bishop and Mrs. Weldon J. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Dahlquist, Mr. and Mrs. Scott A. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. August J. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Golden Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jensen, Mr. and Mrs. Karl R. Taylor, Mrs. D. J. Taylor Reunion At Lagoon Park

Eighty descendants gathered in a Chinese terrace at Lagoon when the family of William G. and Abbie Jane Stoll Taylor met Wednesday for their reunion.

Community spirit is first ingredient in mortar of home's new foundation

COVERED BRIDGE, Utah County — A whole community is helping a husband and wife salvage their house, crushed by a mudslide during spring runoff.

The April mudslide pushed Phil and Madge Taylor's house off its foundation and filled the basement with mud, logs, and boulders. The house is in Covered Bridge, a small community in Spanish Fork Canyon about seven miles south of Springville.

The Taylors weren't there for the disaster. They were serving an 18-month temple mission in South America for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, but returned six months early to assess their problem.

They decided to salvage the house and property, even though damage to the home alone was estimated at $40,000. Some people told them it was beyond repair.

"Without the volunteer help of so many neighbors and friends and the church's efforts, it would be impossible, either physically or financially, for us to save our home," Taylor said.

Church members and two hired men spent three months digging out the basement, piling debris around the house.

The house, Taylor said, was no ordinary dwelling. "Our house is unusual in that it is an envelope home." It was like a thermos bottle, with air traveling around an air space surrounding the interior.

That meant the Taylors spent about $50 to heat and light their house during the winter, while people with similar-size houses paid $500.

"The basement was entirely finished with carpet, stoves and furniture," Taylor said.

The slide shoved the house about 6 inches off its foundation. Windows and support structures were knocked out.

Work is going rapidly with donated equipment and labor, and some help hired by family members and donated to the Taylors.

"We just repoured the basement floor three weeks ago and have been waiting for the house movers to come in and move the house back on its foundation."

"I can't begin to tell you about the wonderful response," Taylor said. "People have sent equipment in free of charge, and others have donated hours and days of labor."

All the wards in the Spanish Fork Stake are helping restore the house and reorganize the grounds for landscaping.

"Give us a month to six weeks and we should be back into the house, at least before the snow flies or before Christmas," Taylor said.

The Taylors lived in Ray Bowers' house in Salt Lake City until July 1. Then they moved into the home of Russell Walpole, just south of the Taylor house. The Walpoles, whose house was narrowly missed by the mudslide, are serving an LDS mission in Australia.

Taylor's spirits seem high, "but I cry when nobody is around."

Barriers and diversion channels will be built to protect against future slides.

Taylor moved to Covered F when he retired. And despite his age, he enjoys his time in the community.
